The Comet 11 is one of the boats that made boating history in Italy in the ’70s and ’80s. Conceived as a pure cruising monohull, it stands out for a design approach that was revolutionary for its time, aimed at maximising living space and comfort on board. The project, born from the renowned French studio Groupe Finot, broke with the traditional naval architecture of the era. The distinguishing feature of the Comet 11 is the placement of the salon (the living area) towards the stern, partly built under the coachroof and the cockpit. This choice made it possible to use the widest section of the boat for common areas, leaving the forward section entirely dedicated to the cabins and the privacy of guests. The result is an interior volume comparable to that of boats considerably longer.
